Reagan's Tax Reform Plan: Richest and Poorest Pay Less

By Anne Swardson
Washington Post Service
WASHINGTON — The tax-reform proposal that President Ron-ald Reagan was scheduled to announce Tuesday night would reduce taxes most for the very richest and the very poorest Americans, according to administration sources and documents. if the Reagan plan passes Con-aress and is enacted, individuals should pay 5.2 percent less on the average in federal taxes than they do under current law, and corporations would pay 22.5 percent more. That is a smaller shift of tax burdens from individuals to business than was proposed in the U.S. Treasury Department's original tax revision plan,

Under the new proposal, taxpayers earning more than $200,000 a year would pay 18.7 percent of their income in taxes instead of the current 21 percent, a tax reduction of 10.7 percent. On the low end, shose earning less than $10,000 would pay 0.9 percent of their income in taxes rather than the current 1.4 percent, and those making between $10,000 and $20,000 a year would pay 2.5 percent instead of 3.2 percent.

The hypothetical tax reduction would be 35.5 percent for the lowest income bracket, 22.8 percent for the next-lowest and 13.5 percent for taxpayers earning from $15,000 to $20,000 a year.

People in the four income brackets up to $200,000 would get larger tax cuts than under the first Treasury plan, while those earning above $200,000 would get a smaller payers earning $30,000 to $50,000 a year who now pay an average of 7.8 percent of their earnings to the Treasury would pay 7.3 percent un-der the Reagan plan — a tax reduc-tion of 6.6 percent. In the first Treasury plan, these taxpayers would have gotten a 9.3-percent tion. White House strategists wanted the president to get the first opportunity to characterize his tax program before its details were re-leased to the public.

The new package would have three personal rates of 15, 25 and 35 percent and a top corporate rate of 33 percent, with lower rates for smaller companies. Interest on a mortgage for a principal home would remain fully deductible.

Like the Treasury's first plan, the president's proposal would restrict deductions for interest payments on second homes, auto, consumer and bank loans to the total amount of each taxpayer's income from investments, plus $5,000. However, these limitations would be phased in over a period of up to 10 years.

Under the new proposal, deductions for business meals would be more generous than in the first Treasury plan, which suggested that $25 be the maximum deduct-

For example, middle-class tax- ible cost of any meal. The new plan of meals above $25.

Half of capital gains would be current 40 percent, and the defini-tion of capital asset would be narrowed somewhat. Treasury One, as the first plan is called, proposed taxing capital gains as ordinary in-come and indexing the value of assets to inflation, a version that would have raised considerably

As in the first plan, state and local taxes would no longer be deductible from federal income tax. Income averaging, allowing taxpayers to average years with unusually high earnings with those before and after them, would be repealed under the new plan.

Contributions to charitable oranizations would be fully deductible, and contributions of stocks or property could be deducted at fair market value. Both of those are changes from limitations proposed in the earlier plan that were strongly opposed by private universities, museums and others. The president's proposal, like its predecessor, would repeal the provision let-ting taxpayers who use the standard deduction deduct charitable contributions.

The tax cut for the lower-income taxpayers is large partly because President Reagan's plan calls for a bigger-than-anticipated increase in the zero-bracket amount, also now by two-thirds of all taxpayers - those who do not itemize de-(Continued on Page 2, Col. 5)

'Calmer Seas' if He Wins

Papandreou Foresees

By Henry Kamm

IOANNINA, Greece — Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou has said that Greece's relations with the United States and the European allies will enter "calmer seas" if his party wins in parliamentary elections on Sunday.

The Greek leader, relaxing in a hotel suite in this town near the Albanian border, after one rally and before another in a grueling election campaign, said Monday he was confident that his Socialist Party would win an absolute majority in the 300-seat parliament.

Less partial analysts say the race against the New Democracy Party is closer, but they do tend to give an edge to the Socialists. Mr. Papandreou, speaking in what he said was the first interview

Brazil Sugar Workers' Strike Ends

SAO PAULO (WP) - Representatives of the Brazilian sugar cane industry and rural workers have ended their strike after signing an agreement mediated by the labor minister, Almir Pazzianotto.

The accord, signed Monday, signaled an important shift toward free collective bargaining between labor and employers as the new civilian government struggles to restore industrial democracy. Since the military left power in March, airline employees, postal workers, teachers, subway and bus drivers, car assembly workers and members of other trades have held about 40 strikes in an effort to restore living standards cut by a two-year recession that has been deepened by an austerity program.

The case has posed serious probms for Italy in its relations with the Soviet Union and the rest of the East bloc, and there have been widespread but unconfirmed reports of diplomatic pressure on the Italian government to acquit the three Bulgarians on trial.

The judge is known to have exressed grave worries in private over the course the trial will take. For example, he is described as being concerned over the extent to which other West European gov-ernments will cooperate with Italy by extraditing various suspects now in their jails who could east further light on the case.

One of the first moves Monday by the prosecutor, Antonio Marini, was to ask for the extradition of suspected Turkish terrorists and drug merchants who are believed to have links with the men on trial.

Mr. Santiapichi has been adamant in insisting that the case will be tried on its merits, regardless of the political and diplomatic pressures. I don't care what they're saying out there," he told a visitor to his office recently.

Capital Monstrosity' And the state of t To Open to the Public

The Executive Office Building next door to the White House, which Harry S. Truman once fondly called "the greatest monstrosity in America," will be opened to public tours next month. Designed by Alfred B. Mullett in French Second Empire style, the edifice resembles a battleship in the rain and a wedding cake in the sun. It was finished in 1888 at a cost of $10 million.

The building narrowly escaped demolition under the Eisenhower administration. Now safely classified on the National Register of Historic Places, it has been freshly restored to its Gilded Age splendor.

Short Takes

Admiral Thomas H. Moorer, who retired in 1974 as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, says that the current proposal to reorganize the JCS is only the latest of a score of plans submitted since the system began in 1947. The new plan would strengthen the chairman's role by placing him in the chair of command and making him a member of the National Security Council. Admiral Moorer says that "the chairman already has all the power" he needs and the proposal "will not eliminate 'interservice rivalry' but will expand it." The admi adds, "Like the country boy said, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it."

New York state is issuing new automobile license plates for the first time in 13 years; many of the old ones are rusty and unreadable. The new plates have the same blue-on-gold color scheme, plus a decal of the Statue of Liberty, whose centennial arrives next year.

The Reagan administration is pushing for relaxation of a congressional mandate of 10 years ago that automobile fuel efficiency be doubled by this year, to an average 27.5 miles a gallon (11.6 kilometers a liter). Reagan Calls Democrats Weak on Communism And Divisive at Home

By David Hoffman

Washington Post Service
MIAMI — President Ronald Reagan, in a Memorial Day political speech has sharply accused Democrats of ignoring the dangers of Communism abroad and of "pitting white against black, women against men, young against old" at

Speaking Monday to 1,600 contributors to Senator Paula Hawkins, a Florida Republican, Mr. Reagan combined an appeal for continued Republican control of the Senate with pointed criticism of Democrats on the issue of military

"The opposition often acts like a weaker America is a safer America," he said. "Like it or not, that's the kind of bizarre logic that will carry the day if the other party regains control of the Senate. Mr. Reagan also accused political opponents of ignoring Communist dangers in Nicaragna.

"Many of those opposing our efforts have steadfastly refused to acknowledge that the rulers of the regime in Managua are, by their own admission," Mr. Reagan said, "hard-core Communists and consider themselves part of the inter-national Communist movement."

The president departed from his prepared text to comment that citizens were confused about the Nicaraguan conflict and declared, to applause, "It's the freedom fighters against the Communists."

"Closing our eyes and making a wish, which seems about the only course of action our opponents will support, won't make this threat go away," Mr. Reagan said. "We need to assist those governments target-ed by the Communists, and it is imperative that we support those brave individuals who are putting their lives on the line to bring democracy to Nicaragua."

In opening his speech, Mr. Rea-gan said that Republicans "have been blessed with grass-roots supporters who are committed to the ideals of individual freedom, family values, free enterprise and a strong America."

"While the other party has tried to build a coalition by segmenting America into warring factions— over the past years pitting white against black, women against men, young against old — we've taken a more positive path." he said.

The remark was almost identical to one that former President Jimmy "Americans might be separated money from LAN-Chile, the counblack from white, Jew from Christry's airline.

After Mr. Reagan called on Mr. Carter to apologize, Mr. Carter said the stridency of his remark had been a mistake.

Larry Speakes, the White House spokesman, declined to elaborate on the president's remark Monday. Mr. Reagan's criticism follows a series of congressional defeats in recent weeks for his military build-up and for his effort to provide aid to the rebels fighting the govern-ment of Nicaragua. He has run into opposition on both fronts from Republicans as well as Democrats. For example, the Republican-controlled Senate, where 22 Republican members face re-election next year, voted to hold Pentagon spending increases to the level of inflation for next year. Mr. Reagan renewed the administration's assertion that Cuba had been engaged in illicit drug trading.

"I have a message for Fidel Castro about the drug trade," Mr. Reagan said. "He can tell American television networks anything he wants but pobody in his perima is wants, but nobody in his regime is going to get away with this dirty drug business."

Mr. Reagan paid tribute to Mrs.
Hawkins by noting that the Demo-crats had no women in the Senate, whereas the Republicans had two, and and by saying that she had compiled an "amazing" record.

By Edward Walsh ABBASSIYE, Lebenon - The men and boys of the village, their faces grim and their voices low, moved slowly away from the cemetery along the hot, dusty main village road. Inside the cemetery, the immediate family remained huddled around the freshly dog gravesite, the final resting place of Hassan Sayi. At the age of 24, Mr. Sayi was killed in Beirut, fighting, his neighbors here said Monday, for the control of this and the other cities and villages of souther the bases that "We think fighting in Beirut is the same as fighting in southern Lebanon," said Hussein Fawaz, a local Amal leader here, "We fight in Beirut to protect the South." Amal went into the Beirut refugee camps to disarm the Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas who have returned there. The militia, the strongest force in southern Lebanon now that the Israeli army

At best, the return of the PLO toits former strongholds would mean more suffering for the residents of southern Lebanon when the Israelis mounted their inevitable counterstrike. At worst, it could mean another Israeli invasion and per-haps permanent Israeli occupation.

Lebanon Is a Memory

Its conflicts seem not only beyond cure but even beyond understanding

When last we read of Christian militiamen slaughtering Palestinians there in 1982, Israel's occupying army was held responsible, even by Israelis. Now Shiite Moslem militiamen are butchering Palestinians in the same camps, Sabra and Chatila, and the world just shrugs. The Christian-led government has all but evaporated. Lebanon's Syrian protectors accuse a former ally, Yasser Arafat, of provoking the slaughter to get back at rival Palestinians.

Lebanon is being cut by a hundred knives, rent by a thousand vendettas. Terror is ran-dom. Last week 50 people were killed and 175 wounded by a car bomb in Christian East Beirut. No one is sure who did it, or why. By any plausible definition, Lebanon has ceased to be a nation.

Until 1982, Mr. Arafat's PLO provided a shadowy government, in tense competition with Syrian forces and Israeli-aided Lebanese. Israel smashed this order, but Moslems and Syrians combined to block the Christians it sponsored. French and American troops, too. were chased out by the terror. The Syrians remain, but they are plainly not in command. These ghastly divisions were inherent in Lebanon's origins. France shaped its borders after the the collapse of the Ottoman empire in 1920. Thrown together in the new state were Maronite Christians on Mount Lebanon, the Moslem and Druse communities of the coastal regions and the Moslems of the Bekaa, the eastern valley, who probably would have pre-

The president had to be a Maronite Christian, the prime minister a Sunni Moslem. the chairman of Parliament a Shiite Moslem, the defense minister a Druse. But demographs gradually unsettled this arrangement. The Moslem populations grew, yet Christians tenaciously dominated commerce and government. The rival factions formed their own private armies and progressively challenged the center in Beirut. A full-scale civil war erupted in the 1970s, magnified by the influx of Pales-

Syria intervened in 1976, with the Arab League's blessing, but it could only play the factions against each other. Israel intervened in 1982, allegedly to disarm the Palestinians but actually to try to restore the Christian dominance. In the shadows there arose yet another army, the Islamic Jihad terrorists, inspired and perhaps directed from Iran. Sectarian and family feuds engendered by all this violence have made even simple ceasefires impossible. A once thriving economy has been destroyed. The wealthiest and ablest Lebanese have long since fled. The United Nations and a few other agencies dispense humanitar-ian aid and medical help, but no law now governs in that unhappy land. It has swal-lowed all foreign illusions, most recently the strategic interests that a series of American presidents proclaimed until just two years ago. Lebanon is more a memory than a society.

A Good Year for NATO

Other Opinion

NATO may be one of the few measurable national security successes of the Reagan period. Final results aren't in, but enough progress has been recorded for the man who counts most in NATO affairs these days, Senator Sam Nunn of Georgia, to let the alliance slip a key deadline that he and Senator William Roth of Delaware set for it last year.

At that time they put in an amendment requiring NATO's European members to improve promptly the alliance's capacity to meet a conventional attack; otherwise America would start reducing its troop levels. The amendment lost, barely, but NATO got the message. Its new secretary-general, Lord Carrington, belped convince members that what they first saw as a threatening and intrusive American diktat was actually a great policy opportunity. The alliance went on to make the requisite commitments regarding munitions stocks ("sustainability") and reinforcement facilities ("infrastructure"). As a result, Senator Nunn says it has earned another year to show it can deliver on those commitments.

Look closely here. Senator Nunn and his policy comrades Bernard Rogers, NATO's military commander, and David Abshire, the U. S. ambassador to NATO, are not talking just about hardware. Nor are they talking just about the familiar grinding NATO argument over "burden sharing" — whether the allies are pulling their weight. They are talking about the readiness of the alliance to perform its prime function of deterring a conventional Soviet attack without having to threaten implicitly to go nuclear at a relatively early stage. So last year's Nunn amendment is on hold. There is, however, a new Nunn amendment, addressing an alarming disparity in bow much NATO and the Warsaw Pact are getting for what they spend. The Europeans have been meeting the goal of a 3 percent annual increase in defense outlays; the United States has exceeded it in the last four years by $120 billion. Even before these increases, however, NATO was spending more than the Pact countries, and producing less. In 1984 it was outproduced by ratios of 2-to-1 to 5-to-1 in major systems: 3,650 to 1,760 in tanks, for instance, The conspicuous exception was, as you would expect of Atlantic allies, in big surface ships.

The trouble, Mr. Nuon says, is that NATO countries wastefully develop and build competing systems. His new amendment fences off $200 million for development projects conducted with allies, requires the Pentagon to consider arms cooperation possibilities at an early procurement stage, and makes the Pentagon test competing U.S. and European systems against each other. This is nuts and bolts stuff, lacking in the drama of the earlier NATO initiative but promising immense rewards for the common defense.

Individual Income Tax Return

Four Criteria for Judging Reform of Income Tax

WASHINGTON — Now that President Reagan has sounded the trumpets for a charge against the Internal Revenue code, the hard work of tax simplification and reform begins. How are we going to judge the merits and demerits of what all these different people and groups are pro-posing? It belps at the start of a prolonged process like this to jot down the criteria by which you want to judge the final product. When it's over, you can look back at the list and decide how well they have done. My checklist consists of four Ps.

II Gross Influx

The first is productivity. This is a practical imperative. We live in an increasingly competitive international economic environment. American workers are competing for jobs not just with each other but also with the workers of Japan, Western Europe and the Third World. American companies are competing with their companies for markets and for profits.

This is a fact of life, maybe the most important reality we face. No theoretical or ideological or emotion-al argument for "socking it" to this group or that can be given greater weight than that practical reality. Many reformers want to make business in general, or a particular industry, "pay up." That's fine, but not if critical as payroll taxes for Social

12. Money you made . [15400 or 1555 more or 1555 UST SOUTH BE HANDED 13. What about all that cash you stashed in that jar under the garage?

This criterion should be of help in deciding which business tax preferences are defensible and which are not. There is a difference between service industries like restaurants, for example, and international businesses like steel or computers. Diners don't fly to London to get a better tax break on a meal, but they can do their resource buying or investing over-seas. The tax code has to reflect those realities, and emphasize incentives to investment over consumption.

The second criterion is progressivity. The income tax system is progressive; it is based on ability to pay. gressive; it is based on ability to pay. The rates increase as the tax bracket rises. All the major proposals reduce the number of brackets, and that automatically reduces the progressivity of the system. You can offset that by closing down some of the deductions or exemptions that benefit mainly upper-income taxpayers. It takes a sharp pencil to calculate who the winners and losers will be.

But the criterion has to be that progressivity is maintained in the income tax system. That is particularly

Security continue to climb and as state and local taxes (generally less progressive than federal taxes) rise to meet the growing responsibilities of those levels of government. The third criterion is principle. When you tackle something as com-plex as the Internal Revenue code, there are constant temptations to cut deals to take care of this or that constituency. Any reform will obviously require compromise, and there is nothing dishonorable about that But compromise becomes dangerous when those who are not party to the deals cannot see any principle that is employed to guide the choice. Then cynicism undermines the product. Since the whole purpose of reform is to restore confidence in the fairness of the system, visible principle has to be maintained. Do we give tax breaks to real estate? Then let's debate the principle of home ownership that lies behind these breaks, and see if we want to apply it to commercial buildings and to resort properties.

Are we going to repeal the deduct-ibility of state and local property taxes? Then let's debate the principle of federalism that underlies that deductibility, and see if it is a principle we are prepared to abandon or compro-mise for the billions of revenues the federal government will gain. In every case, let's put the principle front and center, and measure the tax code changes by that principle.

My final criterion would be poverty, and maybe it belongs at the top of e checklist. The poor and near-poor will have fewer lobbyists and advocates outside the doors of the Ways and Means and the Finance committees than anyone else - and they have a large stake in the outcome.

Just how large is demonstrated in a study last week from the Coalition on Block Grants and Human Needs called "Untax the Poor." Using data from the House Ways and Means Committee, it showed that a family of four at the poverty level paid 10.5 percent of its income in federal taxes this year — two and a half times as much as it did in 1978.

Many families just beyond the poverty line are being taxed back into poverty by the existing code. That is probably not something anyone in-tended to see happen in the last big round of tax revision, but it shows the lack of attention the poor characteristically receive in this process. It will shame us all if it happens again.

From the Price of Bagels to the Meaning of Eternity

N EW YORK — Nations, like people, have public and private selves. To foreigners of my political persuasion, the United States offers a public image less than beguiling - a gigantic militarist state, led by an aged neo-monarch, guided frequently by advisers of dubious intellectual or even moral quality, directed offstage by covert interests of imance and ideology, pur-suing foreign policies of terrifying unreliability.

All the happier then to be able to declare my thanks for the American private self - for the I asked the waitress for a Giant, rather than a Jumbo, and she said. Which is that now, the big one or the small?" nature of this society and the run of its people, for the organic style of it, for its usually generous virtues and its generally all-too-human faults.

Of course the Americans' private persona has changed tremendously, during the three decades of my acquaintance. In physique, in ethnic origin, even in language, Mr. and Mrs. J. Doe are very different from their predecessors in the 1950s, just as the everyday quality of American life has mutated startlingly. It used to astonish me with its infallible efficiency; now it more often amuses me by its old-fashioned charm. For the first time in my life, it is sometimes possible these days for a visitor from Asia or Europe to be a little patronizing about the Americans!

But in profounder ways, I find, the country has remained essentially and delightfully itself. The things that gave me most pleasure when I first came to America give me most pleasure still, and By Jan Morris seem to have just the same effect on newcomers now as they did upon me when I first disembarked at Pier 90 from the SS Mauretania.

There is, for instance, the popular sense of earnestness. I love this old quality. I love the slow steady cadences of American talk, which make more mercurial conversationists, like us Welsh, feel like sheepdogs yapping around methodical sheep, but which lead on so often to decent conclusions, conscientiously arrived at. I love the feeling, still more common in America than in most countries, that grand issues of good and evil preoccupy so many minds, at office desk or restaurant table, and that at any moment, without awkwardness, one may shift the chat from the price of bagels to the Meaning of Eternity. Now as always. I relish the tireless ingenuity of the people. American cars may be passe these days. American telephones are not what they were, but in everyday small devices, wrinkles and innovations, your American remains peerless. Every time I visit, some passing new fancy enthralls me, whether it be a new posture of roller-skating, a new hat craze, a new bit of slang, yet another gastronomic fashion (Thai Nouvelle?), a nonsmokers' motel in Dallas, a gadget for starting the car while you are still in bed, or just another of those inexhaustible ideas of advertisement and ingratiation that give life and fantasy to any commercial midway, anywhere in the country — always something new, for better or for worse, for fortune or for bankruptcy.

And the fun of it all — still incomparable, whoever is president, still bubbling irrepressibly out of the national psyche! When I visited the casinos of Atlantic City, I knew full well that plain greed, not least upon my own, yet I enjoyed every minute of it. The stupendous vulgarity! The preposterous grandeur! The meticulously calculated but still persuasive courtesy!

I laughed with all the old delight when, asking a doorman if Trump Plaza had any rooms left, I heard the request translated into "Hey, Joe, what d'ya know about the availability status?" My heart sang when I asked the waitress for a Giant rather than a Jumbo, Margerita, and she said. "Which is that now, the big one or the small?"

I stand gratefully amazed, as ever, at the contagious stamina of everyday America. I am more than myself when I am here, because I catch some of the irresistible energy of the place, which expresses itself not just in an infinite capacity for staying up late but also in a tireless readiness to take an interest in things, perform small kind-nesses, remember unnecessary allusions and master given names. It took stanting for Americans to become Americans in the first place, on those lonely seashore settlements long ago, and a sense of personal diligence and resolution re-mains the most admirable private quality of the Americans today, whatever its ends or motives.

Which is the truer self, the public or the private, it is beyond my competence to speculate. In any case, you may think it as much an irrelevance as an impertinence for a flibberty-gibbet alien like me, never settling in America for more than a few mouths, to express opinions on these matters at all. What need Americans care, out of the majesty of their superpowerness, for the views of a wandering Welsh essayist? You're probably right, but thanks anyway.

ISBON - The United States is pouring military and economic aid into Mozambique to underpin a Marxist government seriously threatened by rightist rebels who until recently were supported by South Africa with tacit U.S. approval. Such are the ironies of politics in an area where until the mid-1970s, conservative Portuguese and South African governments wielded firm control. Portugal's unceremonious departure in 1975 from its African colonies — Mozambique, Angola, São Tomé. Cape Verde and Guinea-Bissau left them in the hands of Marxistinspired liberation movements heavily indebted, after decades of moral ed military support, to the Soviet bloc. Today those countries, with the possible exception of Angola, are reassessing allegiances, offering political nonalignment and economic safeguards in exchange for badly needed Western aid and investment.

In a bid to encourage this change, the United States and Portugal are involved in a tripartite cooperation experiment coupling U.S. financial resources with Portuguese technical and cultural know-how for projects suggested by Portuguese-speaking African countries. The idea was recently subjected to close scrutiny at a triangular seminar in Lisbon.

Emerging as a priority on the African side was a strong plea for an end By Ken Pottinger to the debilitating civil wars in Mozambique. Angola and Namibia as a prerequisite to the development of the area. Implicit in the plea was a demand for Washington to pressure Pretoria on three points: Deliver an internationally acceptable solution in Namibia, respect your solemn undertakings toward Mozambique and end your attacks on Angola.

The Africans, while not demanding white South African suicide, made clear their view that the West had not acted decisively enough to achieve peace in southern Africa and that the United States had frequently sent confused signals to Pretoria and others in the area. In moderated language, they left no doubt that for them the United States had been equivocal and contradictory in its policy toward Mozambique.

Washington currently seeks to channel $60 million worth of aid, including some $3 million earmarked for nonlethal military assistance, to President Samora Machel's hardpressed regime, but there is opposi-tion from a conservative lobby in Congress sympathetic to the Mozam-bican guerrilla movement. Renamo. In reply, the U.S. deputy assistant secretary of state for African affairs. Frank Wisner, said here that the United States and its allies want peace in Mozambique. He condemned the anguish of continuing violence and aggression there, which he said served no one's interests.

Mr. Wisner's words mesh with converging opinion in Pretoria and Lisbon about the importance of success for the Nkomati peace and secu-rity accord signed 14 months ago between Maputo and Pretoria. The two neighbors agreed then to cease support for rebel movements based in their territories, but so far the results have disappointed Maputo. Nevertheless the United States believes the accord must be seen to be working so as to ease the complexities of solutions in Namibia and Angola.

A notable feature of the Lisbon seminar was the fact that five years ago the radicalism and anti-Ameri-canism of most of the African participants would have invalidated it. Today, judging by many of the views expressed at the gathering, the mine field of post-colonial complexes is well on its way to being cleared. But there was a vital missing link.

Angola, beset by internal rifts, political equivocations and a giant grudge against Portugal, stayed away from the conference. Its attitude was a criticism not only of Lisbon but also of Washington, which persists in a two-track policy — supportive of major

U.S. investments, like Gulf Oil's Cabinda installations, but refusing dip-lomatic recognition until the Cuban troops go home. The United States also insists on a political settlement of the government's 10-year-old guerrilla war against the Western-backed UNITA rebels, a view vigorously re-stated by Mr. Wisner in Lisbon.

Whatever the rights or wrongs of America's policy toward Angola, its whole approach to the region is under close domestic scrutiny, with the Chester Crocker-Frank Wisner doctrine of "constructive engagement" increasingly questioned. A historic moment may be nearing in southern Africa. It remains to be seen whether trilateral politics can work better than bilateral bargainin

Assassinations Matter

Regarding "Lo, America's President Turns Into a King" (May 20): William Pfaff seems to trivialize assassination. He gives an impressive list of victims of assassination be-tween 1890 and 1914, as if the world had gone on pretty much the same without them. But that era closed with the outbreak of World War I, precipitated by the death of the last victim on his list. The destabilizing effect of those killings played a sig-nificant role in creating the climate of tension that resulted in that catastrophe, which paved the way for most of the horrors of this century. To treat so lightly the past consequences of this evil, and then to discredit the security arrangements of President Reagan today, is irresponsible.

Defense: How Much For What?

By Tom Wicker

N EW YORK — On Monday.

Memorial Day tribute was paid to Americans who died in the Civil War and on the battlefields of Cubattle Philippines, Europe, Siberia, the Pacific, Korea, Vietnam, Lebanon and Greeneds, This is a good time to and Grenada. This is a good time to think about the vitally important de-bate on the 1986 military budget. The costly Reagan buildup will be slowed, but how and by how much?

That buildup has focused primarily on new weapons and hardware, not all of it necessary or effective, rather than on the efficiency and readiness of the armed forces. These facts from the Center for Defense Information in Washington offer a vivid picture of what has been happening:

Congress has approved 95.7 percent (if we adjust the figures for inflation) of the Reagan administration's requests for the military in fiscal years 1981 through 1985.

• In the last six years, starting in the Carter administration, the military budget more than doubled; weapons procurement has nearly tri-pled from the $35.3 billion that Congress approved in 1980. Spending for new weapons is the fastest growing part of the federal budget, outstripping even the growth in debt service.

The cost of preparing for nuclear war with the Soviet Union --- even under Mr. Reagan's sensible dictum that such a war cannot be won and must never be fought — has grown from $29.8 billion in 1980 to the $77.5 billion he requested for 1986. By his estimates, the costs of U.S. nuclear war-fighting forces will reach $400 to $500 billion by 1990.

• For eight major weapons sys-tems — the MX missile and the Trident II, the Pershing-2 and the Mid-getman ballistic missiles, sea- and ground-launched cruise missiles, the 3-1B bomber and Mr. Reagan's Strategic Defense Intiative — costs have expanded from $1.2 billion in 1980 to a requested $20 billion in 1986.

Navy shipbuilding costs are up from $8.6 billion in 1980 to $11.6 billion in 1985, with $25.1 billion more projected for 1986 and 1987. To keep these figures in perspective, it is necessary to understand, what the Center for Defense Infor-mation calls the "funding wedge" pattern. That is, "costs are relatively. small in the beginning while weapons are in the early stage of development, but climb very rapidly once produc-tion begins." So when Congress approved a number of new weaponssystems requested by Mr. Reagan in 1981 and 1982, it let itself and the taxpayers in for greatly increased spending three to eight years later.

Once begun, moreover, even as fiscal and international circumstances change, the momentum of weapons development programs makes them hard to stop, or even slow — witness the many lives of the MX. missile, even though it has no secure basing mode and no real mission.

Not only is Congress reluctant to cut off a new weapon and sacrifice the hige sums already spent on it, but most such weapons develop powerful constituencies in the Pentagon and among military contractors and de-congressional districts. -. Partially for these reasons, the Pentagon, when proposing new weapons, often underestimates their long-term costs. CDI figures show that on average during the 1970s "weapons price estimates grew 50 percent between development and actual production." Similarly, the General Accounting Office estimates that, if average historical trends continue, the Penta-gon's 1984-1988 military spending will be at least $173 billion higher than originally estimated.

清明 関係 のいかい はいかい かいかい

These realities suggest that what !the Pentagon spends taxpayers' monspends. The CDI notes that last year Congress cut Mr. Reagan's military requests by $20.5 billion but took no big "funding wedges" permanently out of the budget. It is easier to cut personnel costs and appropriations for routine items like spare parts and ammunition than it is to eliminate big tickets — the useless MX program ($10.4 billion already spent) or the faulty Sergeant York Air Defense Gun ($2.4 billion already spent).

The CDI estimates that $12.6 billion could be swend in 1006 classifiers. lion could be saved in 1986 alone by canceling or slowing these and other questionable procurement programs. But it recommends increasing admin-

The pending congressional budget resolution, setting only the Penta-gon's overall spending limit, is a vitel first step. 'Henry V' With Less Fanfare, More Doubts

BULL DPS 7 is a range of mainframe computers specifically geared to meet the needs of medium sized and large organisations. Organisations who see data processing and office automation as an integral information system for their evolution.

BULL DPS 7 comprises a compatible range of medium and high power systems, from single processor to four processor machines. All can communicate in a DSA network architecture, placing BULL DPS 7 in a particularly competitive position.

GCOS 7, the operating system, opens a whole world of easy to use application programs, adapted to all users, and not necessarily to data processing experts. CGOS 7 is in fact a combined environment for production systems, software development, and information centers.

As a production system, GCOS 7 provides the means of processing, updating, and retrieving large quantities of data, with a high degree of security.

As a development system, GCOS7 leads to a marked reduction in the time needed to develop and update user applications.

Finally, GCOS 7 puts information into a suitably adapted form and places it at the fingertips of all who need it in a company.

Pasteur Institute, Again in the Forefront of Medicine, Battles AIDS

By Amiel Kornel International Herald Tribune

ARIS — In Louis Pasteur's apartment at 25 Rue du Docteur Roux, women carefully tend to the scientist's personal belongings, dusting the quartz-filled vials in the study and regularly replacing mothballs in the slippers in the closet

Eighty-nine years after Pasteur's death, they continue to preserve the personal effects of the man, and, in the surrounding buildings of the Pasteur Institute, nearly 500 researchers carry on the scientific tradition that Pasteur imitiated

Prime Minister Laurent Fabius is to inaugurate a national celebration Monday at the institute to commemorate Pasteur's successful inoculation, in July 1885, of the first human recipient of anti-rabies vaccine. This was the breakthrough that led to the creation of the medical research center.

In Pasteur's basement crypt, mosaics tell the story of his discoveries. Scenes of the brewing of beer, pasteurizing of milk and inoculation against rabies, as well as pictures depicting his other achievements, adorn the walls of a small, ornate chapel that was commissioned in a neo-Byzantine style by Pasteur's ascetic devotee,

Devoted to the memory of the institute's founder, its directors and chief scientists pay their respects at Pasteur's tomb each year on the anniversary of his death.

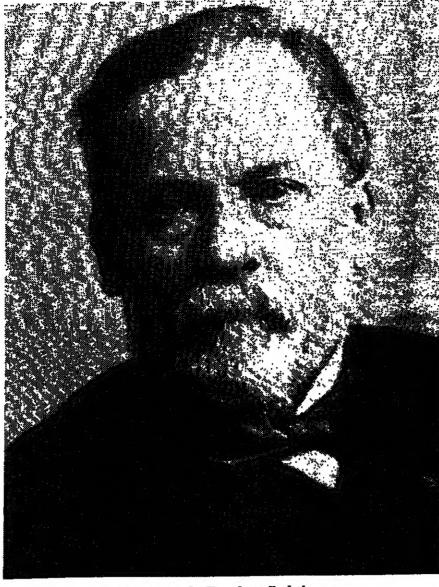

In addition to his discoveries, Pasteur endowed the institute with a formula for excellence a century ago that continues to serve it today. The latest evidence is the growing num-ber of AIDS victims coming to the Pasteur Institute from the United States in the hope of treatment and a cure.

But the French medical researchers, concerned by the rising demand, are becoming reluctant to accept foreign cases. AIDS, or ac-quired immune deficiency syndrome, is an of-ten-fatal viral disease for which there is no care

"It's crazy," said Dr. Willy Rosenbaum, a researcher at the University of Paris VI who is responsible for the Pasteur Institute's AIDS-related clinical tests. "They imagine that they will come here for two weeks, take something, and leave." People are investing their hopes, he warned, in "a mythical treatment that is com-pletely hypothetical."

These criteria, in addition to a six-week waiting list, apparently have been enough to dis-courage most applicants. At present, Dr. Rosenbaum has only three American patients. The Pasteur Hospital has several dozen Americans with AIDS and a French military hospital near Clamart is treating about 10 Americans.

Health officials acknowledge that they are concerned about the consequences a major influx of Americans could have on the limited medical resources available for AIDS-related care in France. Some French patients are already showing an "aggressive reaction" to the presence of Americans in French hospital beds reserved for AIDS victims, said Dr. Rosen-

The institute's international reputation has helped it attract top scientists from around the world. In a 1973 radio interview, Dr. Jacques Monod, then president of the institute, saw problems in the financing arrangements. Dr. Monod, who won the 1965 Nobel Prize for Medicine along with François Jacob and Andre Lwoff, warned that if the state's participation rose above 25 percent, "we will lose an originality and independence that Pasteur himself had

In Mozambique the Reagan administration has decided to support the Marxist government. amazing Congress by proposing "nonlethal" military aid to help defeat a non-Marxist armed insurrection. This category of aid precludes the supplying of weapons and ammunition.

THER anti-Communist resistance groups, in Cambodia, Laos, Vietnam, Angola and Ethiopia, get no overt military aid, although food aid is going, directly or indirectly, to those in Cambodia and Ethiopia. Now, however, there is a drive within the administration and Congress to establish a policy and a strategy for helping armed anti-Communist insurgencies, to show, as a top official put it, that "socialism is not irreversible" and the Brezhnev doctrine is dead." That "doctrine," never labeled as such by Moscow, was named by U.S. officials for Leonid I. Brezhnev, who declared in 1968 after his troops invaded Czechoslovakia that the Soviet Union and other members of the "socialist commonwealth" could send "military aid to a fraternal country to thwart the threat to the socialist

Many in the West interpreted this as meaning that once a country had joined that "socialist commonwealth," the Russians would take any action, including military invasion, to keep it

Until now, the United States has followed a patchwork policy composed of a contradictory combination of old Carter administration decisions (Afghanistan), congressional restraints (Angola) and independent bureaucratic initiative (Mozambique), or confusion (Ethiopia).

In Ethiopia, half a dozen Marxist and non-Marxist opposition groups have been fighting for 10 years either to topple the Marxist ment or to set up independent states.

Despite many opportunities to aid these rebels and avenge the loss to Moscow of an old rebels fighting the Soviet-backed regime in Ethiopia asked the Central Innot known to have provided arms to any of the

At the same time, the United States sent more than 325,000 tons of food, worth $178 million, to the Marxist government in Addis Ababa and to private voluntary relief organizations working with it to stem the famine.

These inconsistencies illustrate the swings of a policy caught between conservative hard-liners in the administration and Congress who are implacably hostile to the central government there and pragmatists still hoping to win Ethiopia back from the Russians with inducements. In Mozambique the same U.S. factions are clashing over administration proposals for $15 million in economic support and $3 million in military assistance to the Marxist regime for

Last year, conservatives in Congress killed the administration's $1-million military aid request for that southern African nation.

This year Senator Jesse Helms, Republican of North Carolina, has attached an amendment to the 1986 foreign aid bill that links military aid to free elections, an improved human rights record and a cut in the estimated 1,500 to 2,000 Cuban and East bloc military advisers to 55 - the same conditions and same limit on U.S advisers attached by liberals to aid to El Salvador. Because none of these demands is likely to be met, the amendment probably kills the military aid request.

For years the administration has turned its back on the opposition movement, the Mozambican National Resistance, and sought instead to woo the government under President Samora Machel away from its Marxist domestic and pro-Communist foreign policies.

The rationale has been, first, to promote detente between white-ruled South Africa and its black-ruled neighbors and, then, to take advan-tage of Mozambique's show of interest in greater ties to the West in hopes of changing its Marxist orientation.

N Angola the administration is prohibited by a 1975 law from giving assistance to Jonas Savimbi's anti-Communist National Union for the Total Independence of Angola. The administration has made no push to reverse this legislation.

The CIA did succeed in engineering coups that installed friendly governments in Iran (1953) and Guatemala (1954), and its aid helped to pave the way for the present government of Chile (1973).

It also backed the winning side in the Chadian civil war of 1981-82. Other interventions have been alleged but not documented.

It was characteristic of past efforts to begin supporting an insurgency group only to drop it later because of shifting politics at home or changing circumstances abroad.

Washington helped organize Cuban exiles after Fidel Castro came to power in 1959 and launched them with feeble backing on the Bay of Pigs invasion in April 1961. Cuban exiles still blame that fiasco on inadequate support from the CIA.

In the first Nixon administration, the United States gave extensive covert aid to General Mullah Mustafa Barzani, leader of rebei Kurds fighting for autonomy against the Soviet-backed Iraqi government in Baghdad. With the help of tens of millions of dollars

The National Front quickly collapsed, but the National Union has survived, thanks partly to aid from South Africa.

Now a move is afoot in both houses of Congress to repeal the aid ban in order to again help the National Union.

In Chad the CIA scored its only recent public success. The agency worked with the ntelligence services of Sudan and Egypt to back Hissène Habré in his 1981-82 struggle for power against a Libyan-backed govern-ment headed by Goukouni Oueddei. With French help, Mr. Habré has remained in

New Berkeley Protests Bring Out Old Leaders

By Robert Lindsey

ERKELEY, California — One by one recently, names that recall the social tur-bulence of the 1960s have appeared, as if from the back pages of history, on the arrest logs of Berkeley's Police Department.

Angela Davis, the black militant who was the Communist Party candidate for vice president in 1980 and 1984; Daniel Ellsberg, the antiwar activist; and Cesar Chavez, who led strikes by the United Farm Workers, have been among the 650 people arrested since April 16 in protests against the University of California's investments in corporations and banks doing business in South Africa.

Baldish and a bit pannchy, Mario Savio, the student firebrand who led the University of California's Free Speech Movement 20 years ago, spoke against South Africa, bringing the crowd in the university's Sproul Plaza alive once The demonstrations are part of the opposition to South Africa's policy of racial separation that has occurred at college campuses around the country this spring.

But in Berkeley, community leaders, including the mayor, Eugene (Gus) Newport, one of those arrested, are helping to lead the protests.

For at least some of Berkeley's residents, the 1960s never died. "We've just had the 20th anniversary of the Free Speech Movement, and some things go on," said Vice Mayor Veronika Fukson, While pursuing a doctoral degree in German at the university, she spent much of her time demonstrating against the U.S. bombing of Cambodia.

"The issues may change," she said, "but the principle remains the same: You don't brutalize other people,"

Craig Seldin, 32, a former student at the university who said he had returned to Berkeley to help "rekindle the movement" after becom-ing bored with life as a criminal lawyer in Houston, stood near Sproul Plaza wearing shorts and a torn T-shirt and handing out leaflets to students urging them to join the protests against South Africa.

Float, or How to Juggle Cash for Profit

By Nicholas D. Kristof

New York Times Service NEW YORK — It was a dull Memorial Day three years ago for the skeletal staff on duty at the Chemical Bank until the arrival, by courier from overseas, of $100 million in checks drawn on a small bank in Illinois.

The staff was supposed to rush the process ing of such large checks, to get an extra day's use of the funds. But the only way to do that in the case of this Illinois bank would be for someone to grab a flight to Chicago that evening and personally hand over the checks. "We asked one of our supervisors if she had ever been to Chicago," recalled Allen M. Silverstein, a senior vice president at Chemical. "She hadn't. I bought her a ticket on my American Express card. A day's worth of interest on $100 million was $23,000. The plane ticket, hotel room and meals were about $500." Flying checks around to get an extra day's resulted in a guilty plea by Hutton earlier this month to 2,000 counts of wire and mail frand, as well as a $2 million fine. Such illegal operations do not seem to be common, but almost all large corporations busily seek to bolster their interest income in legal ways. Amid the competition for float, cash management has become big business. Banks advise clients how to minimize the balances in checking accounts that do not bear interest. Consultants advise corporations how to speed up receipts and delay paying expenses. Books, articles and conferences report the

That idea - which did not work out, largely because the parties could not agree on an appropriate fee — illustrates one of the most common ways that corporations try to get the most interest income possible. The practice, known as "remote disbursement," is legal because it does not cross the line as E.F. Hutton did when it got interest income from money belonging to others.

Hutton succeeded in bilking banks — managing to use millions of dollars a day in bank funds without the banks' knowledge largely because of three factors.

First, the banks' account records did not distinguish between, on the one hand, cash and checks that had already cleared and, on the other hand, checks that had not yet cleared. So a bank might allow Hutton to withdraw $4 million from an account that had a $4-million check deposit in it, even though the bank would not get the funds

Renault Plans June Disclosure Of Restructuring

LONDON - Sinclair Research Ltd., the financially strained home computer maker controlled by Sir Clive Sinclair, said Tuesday that it was seeking to raise £10 million to £15 million ($12.5 million to $18.8 million) from outside investors.

The Sinclair statement comes just four months after Italy's Ing. C. Olivetti & Co. rescued another British home computer maker, Acorn Computer Group PLC, by paying £10.4 million for a 49-percent stake.

As reported, Sinclair acknowledged during the weekend that a recent sales slump had forced it to obtain a two-month extension on payments due to two major suppli-ers, Timex Corp. and Thorn EMI

PARIS - Renault, the French state-owned automaker, said Tuesday that it will present its long-awaited restructuring plan to its labor force on June

The plan, which follows mas-sive losses last year, was drawn up by Renault's recently appointed chairman, Georges Besse. They were put to a board meeting Tresday.

Renault, which lost 12.55 billion francs ($1.33 billion) last year, has already agreed on measures with the unions to lay off at least 9,000 of its 98,000 workers in France this year.

The board has examined the evolution of the work force in 1985 and the level of the adjustment to be made," the company said in a statement. "The scheme and procedures for the adjustment will be presented to a special works committee eting on June 17."

The board also discussed action to improve Renault's productivity and competitive edge, and possible ways to refinance the group over the next few years, including fresh capital in-jections by the state, debt cutting measures and "complecentary searches for liquidity," the statement continued.

came to 90.60 million shares, compared with 85.97 million last Friday. Declining interest rates have been cited as a primary force behind the rally in stock prices since May 1, and they kept dropping Tuesday.

Prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, rose more than $10 for every $1,000 in face value. Though rates are well below their recent peaks, analysts noted, they still are relatively high in comparison to inflation. As long as inflation remains subdued, optimists argue, there is room for further declines in the cost of borrowing money.

The Federal Reserve has apparently given the downward trend in rates some further impetus with the reduction of its discount rate, from 8 to 7½ percent, it announced a week ago Friday.

With all that, analysts said, traders appeared to be reluctant to chase after stocks at the lofty levels they have reached. Rather, they seemed inclined to cash in on some of the market's recent gains. Brokers also said it was natural for investors starting to recover and premiums were rising. Mr. Schieren said a restructuring of Allianz, which was announced in October and began taking effect in January, would allow it more flexibility in reacting to competition.

He said the company had decided to restructure because its function as a holding company had risen considerably due to acquisitions abroad over the last 15 years, Mr. Schieren rejected sugges-

Ajinomoto Co. Sees Drugs As Promising Growth Area

TOKYO - Aignomoto Co., best known for its flavor-enhancer monosodium glutamate, expects drugs and biotechnology products to be its biggest growth areas in the next 15 years, its vice president,

The company is diversifying from cancer research into research on hypertension and antibiotics, he said. Ajinomoto holds the patent for the potential anti-cancer agent nterleukin-2 and has applied for approval from the Health and Welfare Ministry to market an anti-cancer drug, Lentinan, which was ointly developed with Yamanouchi Pharmaceutical Co., he said. Mr. Suzuki also said that Ajinomoto plans to enlarge its amino acid plant in North Carolina and may build one in Europe, though it has not decided where or when. It will complete other ammo acid plants n Thailand and the United States this year, he said. Ajinomoto's sales of amino acids, including the low-calorie sweet ener aspartame, show a 20-percent annual growth rate compared with a 3-to-5-percent growth rate for prepared foods and other products, Aspartame alone showed a 100-percent increase in sales in the fiscal ear ended March 31, he said.

At present, only Ajinomoto and G.D. Searle & Co. of the United States produce and market aspartame through technical and supply agreements including a joint venture in Europe,

Toyo Soda Manufacturing Co. announced plans last month to start European production of aspartame in 1987, when Searle's sales patent expires everywhere except in the United States. Toyo Soda said it may start selling its aspartame from Japanese plants before then in countries where Searle has no patent.

Mr. Suzuki said Ajinomoto was confident about maintaining its ead because it will have larger plants and better technology. version of the product.

And while the U.S. company is still a long way from seeing the full financial impact of its drug, called minoxidil, Upjohn may already be realizing considerable benefits from the cottage industry that has grown up around the compound. Minoxidil has the approval of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, but as a tablet taken to treat hypertension. Years ago, however, Upjohn scientists found that the drug promoted hair growth as a side effect. More recently, doctors

Bolivia Will Seek Cut In Foreign-Debt Costs Reuters LA PAZ — Bolivia will seek

lower interest rates on its foreign bank debt of $825 million at a meeting with bank creditors in New York this week, the Planning Minister, Freddy Justiniano Flores, said Monday. Central Bank sources said Bolivia wanted interest rates reduced to 6 percent from a current 10.5 to 11 percent with a rescheduling over 20 years with eight years' grace.

"Three-quarters of the debt is just accumulated interest," Mr. Justiniano said.

ABU DHABI — Abu Dhabi's International Petroleum Investment Corp. is studying the potential for oil investments in Europe and the United States, a senior official was quoted as saying Tuesday.

Khalifa Muhammad alShamsi, IPIC's director, told al-Ittihad newspaper that the corporation had completed studies on 10 possible investments and retained four for further consideration. They included gasoline stations, references and distribution and refineries and distribution and storage facilities in West Ger-many, Belgium, Italy and the United States, he said.

Mr. al-Shamsi estimated possible investment in each country at $40 million to $200 million and said IPIC would look at other possible investments in Europe, the United States and the Far East.

THE CIDER HOUSE RULES

By John Irving. 560 pages. $18.95. William Morrow, 105 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10016.

Reviewed by

Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

THE RULES referred to in the title of John A Irving's new novel are the rules that are osted by the light switch in the cider house of Ocean View apple orchard on the coast of Maine, where about half the action of Irving's story is set. "Please don't operate the grinder or the press if you've been drinking," one of them rypically reads.

But these rules are more or less ignored. An altogether different set is followed by the minute of the pressure of the present the class in the cider house. A antogether different set is followed by the mi-grant workers who stay in the cider bouse. A typical one holds that if you get in a knile light, you cut your opponent just enough to end the light, not enough to hospitalize him and attract the authorities. Naturally, there is a good deal of cutting in "The Cider House Rules."

Similarly, two sets of rules vic with one another at the locale where the rest of Irving's novel is set. The law of early 20th-century United States says that doctors should not commit abortions. But at St. Cloud's orphanage, which is inland from Ocean View and is a different sort of orchard, Dr. Wilbur Larch follows his own rules.

"No one." he believes, "should ever make a woman have a baby she didn't want to have." Therefore he "was an obstetricism, but when he was asked - and when it was safe - be was an abortionist, too,"

The point - which is driven home with the sledgehammer effect that Irving usually uses is that there are always multiple sets of rules for a given society. Heroism lies in discovering the right ones, whether they are posted on the wall or carved with scalpels, and committing yourself to follow them no matter what.

Actually, this is a sharper point than Irving has made in any of his previous five novels, the best-known of which have been "The World According to Garp" (1978) and "The Hotel New Hampshire" (1981). His novels have tended to sprawl both in tone and focus, but in "The Cider House Rules" he has positively streamlined his form.

Even Irving's excesses seem a little less ex-cessive. It's true that the novel is full of the mixture of comedy and violence that by now has become almost the author's trademark. An excessively outdoorsy couple goes swimming. in some rapids and gets swept away and killed by a log drive. A lobsterman who loves to tinker blows himself and his lobster pound a pieces while building a homemade torpeda. The novel is also full of Irving's special brand of cuteness. The family of a man dying of Alzheimer's Disease (they've always thought him a drunk) can't remember the word Alzheimer's and so refers to it as Al's Hammer is disease. An interfering trustee of the St. disease. An interfering trustee of the St. Cloud's orphanage wants to accuse Larch of being "a nonpracticing homosexual."

And yet the familiar elements of the maca-bre, the violent and the cute all seem more controlled and pointed, more dedicated to the end of advancing living's story toward a devaend of advancing riving's story to and a devi-nite and coherent resolution. It is as if he had made up his mind to stop pretending to he anything but a realist writing a morality tale, and to devote all his strengths and weatherses; to that particular end.

don't want to see it."

Ahead by 79-49 at intermission,
Boston set title-series records for most first-half points, biggest halfmost trist-hall points, biggest half-time lead and total points. The pre-vious marks were 76 points (the Cettics in the first half against St. Louis in 1960); a 27-point halftime (New York over the Lakers in 1970) and a 142 total (Boston against the Lakers in 1965).

Boston's 62 field goals were a record for a championship-series game, and its 60.8 percent floor shooting percentage crased the mark of 60.6, set by the Lakers against the Knicks in 1970.

The Celtics battered the Lakers inside and outside. The Lakers had only two leads, tional Basketball Association at 2-0 and again at 9-8 on an 18footer by Earvin Johnson. It was the last field goal the Lakers scored for almost three minutes as the Celtics took over the boards and got their running game going. Danny Ainge scored 15 of his 19 points in the first quarter to pave the way to a 38-24 advantage. He made seven of his first nine shots, including six in a row. "I thought the key was stopping their first break," Ainge said. "It set the tone for the entire game." The winners' running game was at its best in the 41-point second quarter, when they shot 16 for 24, including two 3-pointers by Wed-man and one by Ainge. Boston's first half included 20-5 and 18-3 SCOTING TURS.

There was no letup. In the third period, said center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, "we were just wondering how bad it could get. And it got worse." The Celtics made 68 percent of their fourth-quarter shots.

"You could see their egos crum-bling," said Boston's Cedric Max-well. "It's like I'm talking to you and I suddenly slapped you. You'd have a shocked look on your face, wouldn't you? That's what they looked like."

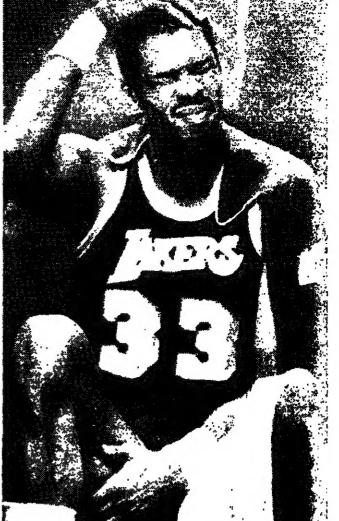

The game got rough in the third period. With 7:58 left, Ainge picked up a technical foul for throwing a ball at Byron Scott, and McHale and Kurt Rambis got into a shoving match.

"Byron got me with a forearm to the back of the head, and I lost my cool," said Ainge of the technical which cost him $100. "I thought it title as a player in 1967 and as head lerence finals of the playoffs.

Two years ago, favored Juventus lost in the final to Hamburg. Eight members of that team can now make amends. > No one at either club sees anything in the Italians' 2-0 victory over Liverpool in last winter's so--called Super Cup. It was played in Turin in foul conditions and with a somewhat partial referee. Yet afterward Osvaldo Bagnoli, who astutely guided Verona to the Italian championship, observed, "Against teams that play a zonal game" — and Liverpool does, marking territorially rather than man-to-man -"Juve goes on honeymoon."

Maybe she does, but honeymoons can be stormy. Says Ray Wilkins, an Englishman well adapted at AC Milan: "I find myself shouting at players to stay cool, not to get emotional. This is where Italians are so different from the English. If you get on top of your marker, you'll crucify him because his temperament will collapse."

But just who is to crucify whom? Uncharacteristically, Liverpool arrived in Brussels late Tuesday uncertain of its lineup and of the fitness of several key players. Manager Joe Fagan announced the fol-lowing team (which contradicted stories in the early-evening papers that quoted players as saying they had "no chance of being fit"): goalie Bruce Grobbelaar, defenders Phil Neal, Mark Lawrenson, Alan Hansen, Jim Beglin; midfielders Jim Nichol, Kenny Dalglish, John Wark and Ronnie Whelan; forwards Ian Rush and Paul Waish. The injury doubts begin at the heart of the defense. Ireland international Lawrenson plays precisely two weeks the dislocating a shoul-der blade, the kind of minry that lingers in the mind like a toothache. In midfield, omitting specialists Sammy Lee, Jan Moldy and Kevin MacDonald, Liverpool opts for Dalglish. In so doing it disturbs its finest attacking duet, which had overcome the scalpel and the aging thing different in the dressing room Wednesday. But his president, Boniperti, wasn't a bad prophet: His comment came just before England's domination of the European Cup. Eight of the last nine finals - which have yielded few goals indeed - will have featured an English champion. Nottingham Forest won the trophy twice, Aston Villa once, and — in 1977, 1978, 1981 and 1984 — Liverpool. I doubt the men in red will show much British chivalry toward Italy's old lady this time either.

OBSERVER Truly Awful Things

By Russell Baker

N EW YORK — It's my conten-tion that there have never been so many Truly Awful Things as there are today. There is a professional football league that plays football all summer long, for example. That is a Truly Awful Thing.

I doubt that the Assyrians, the Babylonians, the Medes or the Persians, who thrived in a thoroughly mattractive era and put up with some pretty awful stuff, would have tolerated summer football.

I imagine word reaching the Assyrian king that a cabal of capitalists is gathered at the Nineven Plaza Hotel drawing up a plot. "A plot?" (This is the king talking, and you know how kings feel about

"Yes, Majesty. The spies say these rogues hope to milk the viewing audience of more millions of asters by starting a summer foot-

Do you think the king is going to sit still for that? Hah!

I hear him hissing, "Football right on through the baseball season? That is one Truly Awful Thing." (All right, you can't hiss that in English, but the king isn't speaking English, is he? He's speaking Assyrian.) Next day at the Plaza the Assyrian comes down like a wolf on the fold cohorts gleaming in purple and gold, and it's curtains for one group of capitalists so greedy they were ready to inflict a Truly Awful Thing on humanity.

Some very decent people, Americans of modern Syrian heritage, are going to read this and send angry

We have all heard that modern Italians and Greeks are unrelated ens, who thrived long after Assyria cient Chinese," please, and make it to the ancients of Rome and Athhad vanished; surely nobody living today can feel kin to people who worshipped Ashur 3,000 years ago on land now part of Iraq?

And yet, some very decent American of modern Syrian heritage will send a letter - "sick and tired of seeing our people stereotyped as wolves because of that idiotic Lord Byron with his purple-and-gold-cohort verse." Why so sure? Because I received such letters three years ago after writing about those antique Assyrians in "wolf-on-the-fold" termin-Knowing all this, why not forget Assyrians and cite Babylonians or Medes as tough cookies who would have known how to stamp out a summer-football pestilence? Because it would make no difference. Choose Medes and there will be angry mail from Americans who remember family tales of their Mede blood. ("I'm sick and tired of these Mede stereotypes . . .")

Babylonians? It's hard to believe, but there are people out there somewhere whose sensitivities are bruised every time Babylonians are criticized. It is a certainty, because the land is swarming with people willing to spend their lives being offended.

Spending a life in quest of of-fense in order to enjoy a righteous outrage is a Truly Awful Thing which did not exist, except among hopeless neurotics, until the 1960s. It was a byproduct of the black civil rights movement, which provided such a heroic spectacle of abused people fighting for their rights that before long very few Americans, including those already possessed of all rights guaranteed by the Constitution plus many others provided by wealth, could resist the pleasure of struggling heroically for their own rights.

Now, another Truly Awful Thing: Would you believe vile and Note that in choosing ancient disgusting greed has infected the ber; next year - who knows - all

'Hope for the Best, Expect the Worst'

'Miracles of Courage' at a Clinic for Gravely Ill Children in Boston

By Dudley Clendinen New York Times Service BOSTON — Andrea Caley, who is considered a trouper, came in a white knit cap in her brother Daniel's stroller - the cap because she had lost her hair. the stroller because she was tired. Her mother, Kristin, had Daniel, a package of homemade cereal candy for the staff, and a smile. Her 4-year-old sister Roberta pushed the stroller.

"Too tired to walk today, Andrea?" Sue Thompson, a nurse,

"Tooooo tired," said Andrea, who is 5. Her bone marrow transplant had failed.

April, 4, who is considered dramatic, came prepared to yell when they put in the needle for her chemotherapy transfusion.

"I hear more fussing and moaning and groaning in here!" said Jason Vitale, 6. "Now I know I'm the bravest one." His mother, Martha, smiled at her sturdy, brown-haired boy.

The pain, the bravery of children, is always affecting, but it is the bravery of parents of critical-ly ill children that drew Monica Dickens here to write a book, "Miracles of Courage."

The sudden hospitalization of her grandchild for a rare disease awakened her writer's instincts to the plight of parents of children who might die: uncertain of the outcome, with no opportunity for heroics, they simply have to cope, day after day.

For Dickens, a great-grand-daughter of Charles Dickens and a Cape Cod resident who has written novels and autobiographical accounts, it became her 35th

Dickens came to see him, won his approval and immersed herself in the families of this clinic "for what turned out to be three years, without asking myself what the purpose was, what the market for the book would be," she said the other day, adding, "I was writing a testimony to them."

cluster the drug treatments and to use them in the central nervous system and the blood. Usually, now, they can knock the leukemia into remission and hold it there for years. In about two out of three cases the children live. But they don't know which two out of three. "It's like the sword of Damocles —it's always there," Truman said. The leukemia can recur at any time in the three-year treatment. And if bone marrow transplant fails, Truman has no veapons left.

"Hope for the best, and expect the worst, that's what we did," said Andrea's mother. "And we didn't expect the worst. But when she relapsed, that's what we had to accept."

Her manner was quiet and strong. She went into the examining room where her daughter was waiting for the bone marrow needle, and as it went in she dabbed at the tears popping from Andrea's eyes.

"Ow-Ow-Ow-Ow-Ow!" Alldrea yelled, from underneath the many hands holding her steady on the table. "Ow-Ow-Ow-Ow-mates young enough to be his children. Ellis, a supervisor at the Southern California Rapid Transit District for 10 years, had not intended to join the force the day he There's no age limit anymore."

Her mother dabbed calmly, efficiently, as the noise went on. And at the foot of the table, her little sister Roberta scrunched un her face and jammed a pink toy bear on her ear.

The U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeal had ruled the county's age centing for sheriff's deputies was discriminatory, forcing both the sheriff's and police departments to drop their 35-year-old limits. Initially, department superiors were skeptical, but Ellis said the physical training was fairly easy, even if he was referred to as "Grandpa" and "Pops" by his college age class mates. After his graduation, Ellis - a college graduate and a reserve officer for eight years - will be assigned to a year of patrol dure like any other revokie cop.

James Kaizer rushed home near the end of her European concertour in plenty of time to win the World Championship Old-Time Piano Playing Contest in Monticel lo, Illinois. For the second consecutive year, the Peoria woman took first place in the fund-raising of test held by the Monticello Railway Museum. Last year, her husband, Ed, also a music reacher at Bradley University in Peoria, finished second. This year, he stayed behind to perform in the 10th and final concert on the couple's annual Europe-an tout, a 21-day tour of West Germany and Switzerland featuring ragtime and jazz piano music.
